Storytelling: You Can Do It!

Learning Triangle Activity Sheet

Act out "A Lost Button" from Frog and Toad Are Friends. Encourage your child to act and sound like the characters. For example, the sparrow might say, "Chirp! Chirp! Excuse me, did you lose a button?"

Storytelling is just as important to your children as reading a book. In fact, for very young children it is even more beneficial because it allows them to imagine the stories as you tell them. They will learn language skills as they hear your voice and see your expressions. It can also be a wonderful bonding experience as you tell classic tales or stories about your own past that they will remember for the rest of their lives.
